Tribe Could Still Have Clinic: State Law Would Not Apply to Reservation March 28, 2006 -- If South Dakota's near-total ban on abortion dodges challenges at the ballot box and in court, Oglala Sioux Tribe president Cecelia Fire Thunder hopes to establish a clinic that performs abortions outside the reach of state lawmakers but inside the state, on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation. The unique relationship between federally recognized Native American tribes and the states in which they reside means abortion clinics could operate inside the state, even after the law takes effect, according to South Dakota Attorney General Larry Long. Fire Thunder is one of 16 leaders of the South Dakota Campaign for Healthy Families, a group that last week announced its intent to collect the 16,728 signatures necessary to take the law to a statewide referendum
